

EQUUS SURVIVAL TRUST ACTION ALERT

Critically Endangered Baca Chica Colonial Spanish Horses Need to Relocate From New Mexico Drought!

December 2011

A rare and unique herd of Colonial Spanish horses in New Mexico are sadly being dispersed. From one of the last original families who have bred a Colonial Spanish strain of horse known as the Baca Chica, for six decades, the time has come for them to place individual horses into the hands of others. The Center for America's First Horse, an affiliate conservation organization of the Equus Survival Trust, has been asked to take a stallion, a mare and her 2011 filly at her side, and an 11 year old broodmare. They must be moved immediately! The owners are not able to support or care for them much longer. We must act now!

Not only will The Center be providing a loving and forever home for this group, but they will be continuing the legacy of these rare bloodlines. A number of offspring from the stallion already reside at The Center and are proven performance and ambassador horses. The Center's purpose as a non profit organization is to assist in rescuing Colonial Spanish horses in need, and aid in genetic conservation. An opportunity awaits them!

Please help us assist these horses by making a donation of any amount directly to the Center of America's First Horse.

<http://www.centerforamericasfirsthorse.org/rescue-horses-in-need.html>

If you can't give financially, consider a donation of goods or services which could be sold or auctioned on Ebay. Your contribution is fully tax deductible and will go towards transportation, feeding and care.

For the horses,

Stephanie Lockhart and the Board of Directors
Center of America's First Horse

Sanctioned by:

Victoria Tollman, Executive Director
Equus Survival Trust

